EMMA ALLEN

Hope Gangloff at Susan Inglett Gallery, 522 West 24th Street, opening February 3, 6-8 p.m., through March 12, inglettgallery.com

I would maybe think these paintings were twee if I didn't love them so much. I admit I live in Brooklyn and have tried to acquire the first edition of "Daddy Long Legs" that Gangloff illustrated in one of the works in this show, both of which facts make me feel like, really cool. No, these paintings, with their subdued pastel depictions of women in knee-high socks near space heaters, discarded seltzer bottles, and over-stuffed bookshelves make my heart swell with a feeling of home.
