STUDIO TRACKS

HOPE GANGLOFF

The New York-based artist shares her studio playlist

"THE IDEA OF picking a list of songs is like picking a few grains of salt out of a salt shaker, and you really need all the salt in the salt shaker while finishing any single painting," Gangloff (below, in her Upstate New York studio) told us after we asked her to contribute her studio playlist for this issue. "I'm not a musician. How I relate to the world around me is visual; making decisions in, or curating any of my other sensibilities is wholly foreign to me. Songs are short, and music is so beautiful and abundant—but this is how I feel tonight."

Gangloff's work is on view at Susan Inglett Gallery, in New York, through March 23.
