

Laskowski, Emily. "72 Hours in Aspen," Cowboys & Indians, 11 May 2020.

THE PREMIER MAGAZINE OF THE WEST COWBOYS & INDIANS

"Aspen is a life to live," sings John Denver, "see how much there is to give." The longtime Aspen resident wrote profusely of the sunshine and snowcaps prevalent in the posh playground of his adopted home state. And though Denver lived there most of his life, Aspen offers just as much enchantment to visitors passing through for a jet-setting weekend, no matter which season. After C&I stopped in for a whirlwind visit last year, we asked some locals to help us chart an easy guide to basking in the "Aspenglow" for a few days.

SEE: Aspen Art Museum

"What ultimately differentiates Aspen from other destination communities in the West is the way in which global arts and culture are inherent to its sustainability." -KristinAnn Janishefski, Aspen Art Museum communications director

Plan Your Visit: Through September 13, multidisciplinary artist Maren Hassinger presents galvanized wire rope sculptures and concrete works that mimic the outdoors in her exhibit Nature, Sweet Nature. With a view of Aspen Mountain in the background, the museum's roof-deck sculpture garden plays host to seemingly windswept wire vines and planters scaled to human size.