In Memoriam: Sarah Charlesworth, Conceptual Photographer

By David Schonauer Monday July 1, 2013

Fine-art photographer Sarah Charlesworth, whose trenchant work investigated pop culture by borrowing from and tweaking its imagery, has died of a brain aneurysm, reports Gallerist NY. She was 66. Charlesworth is perhaps best known for her "Modern History" series, in which she produced photographs of the front pages of various newspapers, typically excising all the content except the nameplate and photographs. She was a member of the so-called "Pictures Generation," which also included artists Sherrie Levine, Richard Prince, and Laurie Simmons.
